LIVING ON NOTHING

APPARENTLY MANY IN WASHING TON SUCCEED IN THIS. *

Lives of "Hangers-On" in the Capital Are a Mystery-Seem to Be the Beneficiaries of a Special Providence.

In proportion to its population there are probably more men who contrive to live on nothing class or low-grade. He toileth not, neither does he spin, but he has mastered the art of living on nothing a year and living moderately well on that intangible income. In New York, Chicago, Boston, St. Louis and other commercial centers, there are hordes of the well-fed, wellgroomed, who live sumptuously year 'n and year out without any visible means of support; but the Washington gang who manage to eke out existence on zero income are in general a shabby lot. Whence they come, and to let go of it. whither they go, are equally impenetrable mysteries. How they live, as well as where they live, are bother some matters to study out. When Au gustus Thomas, the dramatist, spent several months in Washington a number of years ago for the purpose of picking up characters and absorbing "atmosphere" for a Washington play, he was deeply interested in the capital's unique collection of hotel hangers-on. The dramatist thought the hangers-around existence must be a gloomy one and yet they appeared to him as cheerful chaps.

"How these fellows," said he, "con trive to perennially provide them selves with shelter, food, raiment, moderately clean linen, even an occasional smoke, is a subject that fascinates me, because it looks too craggy matter of whisky, that is an easy one. spend. Any man wearing a clean collar-even if his shoes be shined with stove polbooze when he can't get a mouthful to a miner. eat. Of all the free commodities in the world, whisky is the freest. But how, when and where they eat-how turn a man's head when he has a stiff some of them even manage to keep neck. their trousers creased-how they manage' to square themselves for being just hangers-around-I want to know, as they put it in Boston town."

There can be no question that these hangers around and chair warmers are the beneficiaries of a special providence who looks after disappointed office seekers and job-losers in Washington. They are a pathetic lot, and wear that expectant look which causes acquaintances to extend an invitation to "wet a whistle," an invitation which is rarely refused, for it is written pledge of the Washington hanger-on never to refuse a drink. In a majority of cases their acquaintances are sought with financial, not alcoholic prospects in view. An acquaintance who cannot produce the fluid in exchange for a few stories is soon given the go-by. Time to them is not worth much, but yet it is too valuable to waste with men who cannot buy the drink.

Most of these unfortunates are men who have lost government jobs either on account of incompetency or reckless habits-for exchange of administration now amounts to but little so far as job-losing is concerned, though these men always charge their dismissal from service to this. It does not take long for many of them to degenerate into the type slangily known as booze-grafters. After getting a taste of Washington life it is difficult to return to their homes in the states, but, with bulldog tenacity, they remain in Washington and drift from bad to worse, until some bighearted senator or congressman gives them free transportation home, and this is the best day's work ever done for them. -Lilian M. Cheshire in Detroit Free Press.

Literary Pioneers.

Polite literature, so far as this country is concerned, undoubtedly has its fountainhead in the writings of Washington Irving; but the first literature to have the positive American smack and flavor were the novels of J. Fenimore Cooper. Cooper's novels were a revelation to the old world of the fact that in the new world a fresh vein had been struck, something that was as much American as Dante was mediaeval or Virgil and Cicero classical. It is not too much to call Cooper the Columbus of American literature. Charles Brockden Brown, a much greater genius than Cooper, approaching in the subtlety of his intellect the greatest of the ancients, was prevented by his morbidity and introspectiveness from gaining the palm which passed to the author of the "Deerslayer" and the "Pathfinder."

FOR NEW FORM OF MEMORIAL

It is easier to catch cold than it is Washington Star Protests Against Further Erection of Statues.

> Regarding the latest addition to the capitol's outdoor art the Kansas City

Times says: "Borglum's equestrian statue of Gen. Sheridan seems to be a distinct addition to the sculpture of the capital. Now if the city could only get rid of Andrew Jackson on the rocking

The Andrew Jackson statue is in some eyes merely the most objectionable example of a school of public sculpture which is strongly in evidence in Washington and which offends the artistic taste. The "man on horseback" looms large on the horizon here. There are so many such sculptures that a visitor who knows nothing of the protests which have been voiced during late years might with reason conclude that the broze equestrians represent the highest American ideal. It is now believed, however, that a new era has opened. The Sheridan statue, satisfactory as it is viewed as an example of its type will, perhaps, be the last of its kind erected here. Most Washingtonians sincerely hope so, at all events. The Grant memorial will establish a new standard of outdoor art, the only regret aroused being that it has been so improperly located. The Columbus memorial, the design for which is about to be selected, will presumably carry out the later thought on the subject of the commemoration of men by artistic sculpture. The fact is we have been too meager in our provisions for the perpetuation of memories of great men by means of sculptures. The dollars have been doled out sparingly and the insignificant equestrian and pedestrian figures represent this national parsimony. A more liberal spirit now prevails. The fact is recognized that if the country is to acquire intellectual growth it must encourage the fine arts, and it is the duty of the United States government to take the lead in this direction. Congress has begun to appreciate this fact so that its appropriations during the past few years for such purposes have been sufficient to enlist the services of the greatest sculptors in the evolution of artistic memorial designs. It is now confidently expected that this winter congress will provide appropriately for a Lincoln memoris. This creation, whatever form it may assume, should symbolize the evolution of the national taste and render forever impossible any more isolated men on horseback in the national capital.-Washington
